Note Chapter 6 covers the basics of Lightroom in detail. And you can learn about PS in many tutorials, including my tutorial, Photoshop Elements 5 for Dummies (available online at www.dummies.com/id/photoshop). * Adobe Photoshop Creative Suite : This is the commercial version of Photoshop—the one used in TV advertising—and it includes the other Adobe Creative Suite tools. It's an absolute monster of a program. If you have lots of digital graphics to work with, Photoshop, Lightroom, or Elements may be the way to go. If you just have a few images to work with, Photoshop is still a fantastic tool.

Chronic Tinnitus Chronic tinnitus, often referred to as “ringing in the ears,” is a noisy sound that has a constant presence in your life. Tinnitus occurs because the sound is formed in the auditory center and transferred to the auditory nerve, usually in the absence of any outside stimuli. This can be either an acute condition or a long-term condition. In some cases, the tinnitus is so loud that you notice it every day, and you need to take action to control it. In other cases, the tinnitus is at a mild level or may not be present every day. The most common type of tinnitus is chronic, but it also can be acute or intermittent (see separate explanations below). Tinnitus is a condition that usually is diagnosed by a physician, but it can be a symptom of another condition, as well as a separate condition. In some cases, the tinnitus is caused by a physical illness. In other cases, there are no definite causes. Chronic tinnitus usually is diagnosed if there are several symptoms that last for more than six months or if the tinnitus is interfering with your life. Your doctor will ask you questions to help you determine if chronic tinnitus is present.

Causes of tinnitus Chronic tinnitus, a type of subjective tinnitus (meaning the noise is perceived by the patient), is often chronic and is most often considered when there are multiple symptoms and when the sound is distracting or interfering with your life. Noises or sensations that come from within the ear can be caused by earwax, effusion (fluid in the middle ear), ear infections (perforations), a blood clot in the middle ear, or an abnormal growth in the ear. Therefore, your doctor should ask you about what noises are present in your ears and whether they are constant or just happen intermittently. In some cases, a tumor is present and can be causing chronic tinnitus. An ear infection or other infection can cause a constant noise. Also, the increased pressure caused by an ear infection can cause pain that can be felt at the base of the skull or on the neck, which can cause tinnitus. Other causes of tinnitus include: Otosclerosis— A buildup of calcium or a change in the bones or inner ear can damage the hearing system and cause some mild, subjective tinnitus Vertigo

Clouds Ahead for Blue Blockers By McClatchy Special Contributor New York-based Urback, a developer of cyber-security tools for the financial industry, launched an online anti-hacking tool on Monday, calling it “Blue Blocker.” The Web-based tool is designed to block attempts by hackers to break into computers or virtual private networks (VPNs) in order to steal intellectual property. The tool, which costs...Article content Frank Zampino, the former mayor of Mississauga, Ontario, once boasted of “never having a single political scandal while I was in office” — and that included being investigated by provincial police. When he resigned the mayorship in 2006, it was because of his misuse of public funds, a probe that led to a scathing report into the mayor’s conduct. But it ended up doing nothing, partly because the prosecutor who was to prosecute was removed from the case after making public comments critical of her own boss. Try refreshing your browser, or 'Political experts see me as a prime target for prosecution': Paul Szabo on the bizarreness of Mike Harris' sex-for-contracts case Back to video Now a new political scandal is brewing in Canada, with roots in the former Ontario Tory government led by the late Progressive Conservative Prime Minister Mike Harris, who was first elected in 1985. And the latest target in that scandal is Mr. Zampino, who is at the centre of what has been dubbed a “$20 million” sex-for-contracts scandal. But to say the legal landscape is peculiar doesn’t do justice to how bizarre this case has become. Here’s a helpful application to combat criminal parking. A Kentish plumber has spotted a “really bright” idea to stop unsightly car parks being built. James Taylor, from Sittingbourne, spotted one of the 888 spaces used at the Herts Valley Junction (HVJ) roundabout. He said the more space left free, the worse it was for the drivers coming in and out of the busy industrial estate. The Herts Valley Junction roundabout is the busiest in the country and one of the best-known in the world
