Kentucky's largest police department is partnering with state police to assist the Louisville Metro Police Department with the investigation of this video posted online that appears to show a rape-revenge attack on an Asian woman. The Louisville Metro Police Department (LMPD) said in a Facebook post that the video was posted on the internet and a tip had been received. It is not known how the video went viral and came to LMPD's attention. The LMPD said that, under the Kentucky Fair Reporting Statute, it had to release an initial "general" release of the video to the public. Police department spokeswoman Kristen Cruz told The Daily Beast that the LMPD is working with the state police in this case. She said that the first public release of the video will be through social media, a spokesperson told The Daily Beast. The LMPD said that the LMPD and Louisville Metro Public Safety Department (LPSD) do not have any additional information available at this time. The LMPD said the incident happened on May 24. LMPD Lt. Andrea Thomas is assigned to the sex crimes unit and said that the incident is an isolated incident and people should avoid making assumptions about the victim. Photos of the victim were being shared on social media, the LMPD said, and the woman's identity remains anonymous. The first six seconds of the footage show what appears to be a red truck. The next portion shows a hood being lowered on the truck. The fourth and final clip appears to show a person in the open driver's side window threatening the victim's life, pulling her out of a vehicle and dragging her along the road until she is no longer visible on the screen. The LMPD asked for anyone with more information to contact its sex crimes unit. A photo of the truck, like the one at the top of this post, was posted to a Facebook account: www.facebook.com/A271919824023405/photos/a/1135115132997181/1108506403090481/?type=1. Click on the photo to view the photo in a separate window and see a photo of the victim that is visible behind the window. Story edited by Benjamin Smith. Image by The Daily Beast. Codi Wilson, CP24.com The Toronto Police Service is investigating after a video surfaced on social media Wednesday featuring a group of officers punching a man following a traffic accident. The video, which was shot in the area of Dufferin Street and Oxford Street, was shared on social media along with the caption "1st pres and the problem." The video shows a group of five officers who are seen physically and verbally assaulting a man who was found unconscious in the driver's seat of a car that was crashed into a garbage bin. In the video, an officer is seen pointing a gun at the man, while another officer is heard shouting "tuck it away" before he punches the man multiple times. At one point in the video, officers can be heard telling the man to stop kicking and that he is "going to jail." "I don't understand. Why are they doing this to me?" said the man, who asked that only his first name be used out of fear of legal consequences. "I can't do anything wrong. I haven't done anything wrong, so why are they doing this to me?" A woman, who is seen crouching beside the man, can be heard saying that the man was sitting in the driver's seat of his crashed car when officers arrived and asked why he was parked in an odd location. She said the man was having a medical issue and was asked if he had any drugs before the officers began assaulting him. A second man can be seen trying to help the man who was already being handcuffed. The second man told CP24 that the group of officers got out of their vehicle to kick the man in the head and stomach multiple times. "The cops came, they had their guns out, they went crazy," he said. "I'm a cop so I'm used to it but I'm like is this our job? Why are they doing this? This is wrong." The second man said the officers' "mindset" seemed to be to "f*ck with people." "It's a rat race," he said. "If you're not doing what they want you to do, they're gonna f
