I'm working on an iOS 6 project in Xcode 5.1. I would like my application to display a certain UIViewController on startup. In the app delegate I do this in viewDidLoad: `[[NSBundle mainBundle] loadNibNamed:@"ImportantViewController" owner:nil options:nil];` Everything works as expected, but I would like to ensure that ImportantViewController is displayed before I load its nib file. This is because I'd like my program to load a UIImage instance from the nib of a UIImageView which I instantiate in the viewDidLoad of my ImportantViewController. How can I ensure that ImportantViewController is displayed first? A: You can't do this. Nibs are autoloaded, so if a nib file is named A.nib, it will be loaded as necessary. You'll need to have your app delegate call viewDidLoad on that view controller or (in the case of your UIImageView, the imageView) if you want it to load a nib file at some point.
