The research is a case study addressing the structure and function of the photoreceptor layer of the human retina and the retinal pigment epithelium (RPE). The following area of study will be undertaken: I. Quantitative analysis of RPE pigment. II. Specificity of molecular interactions of RPE membranes. III. Characterization of receptor sites for specific proteins on the RPE cell surface. IV. Specific binding of photoreceptor cell surface proteins by the RPE cell surface. The use of digital cameras in the compression of moving video to a smaller size is well-known.
