I thought it was a one time download, and it has come in several different forms. Is there a way to get a link for the work only file? Thanks! A: No, there is not. Here are some options: Find out which repository they are located in. Probably the same place as the source version is. Print the file header from within a Windows Explorer window. From a command line, run "file mathscriptlabelviewdownloadcrack.cfm" and grab the first value from the output. This is the magic cookie. You could put a script on the command line to automate this. Update, 5:00 pm: Over the last two hours, the Market Data API is still giving a 500 error. As it stands, GBP/USD is closed for the day. If you recall, yesterday after seeing a big move higher in USD/JPY, traders took to GBP/JPY and GBP/CHF to bid GBP higher. The next stop after GBP/CHF was EUR/GBP and EUR/CHF. However, as you can see from the chart above, GBP/CHF initially moved up like the rest of the world but quickly fell back as it found resistance at 1.3195 and 1.3150. Even EUR/GBP couldn't keep pace with GBP/CHF. As you know, GBP/CHF is now at its lowest level since Dec. 17th. The situation remains the same today. And in the minutes, EUR/GBP was there with GBP/CHF for support. At the time of writing, EUR/GBP is trading at 1.1599 while GBP/CHF is around 1.2842. Some GBP traders have started to sell GBP/JPY because the pair is close to testing resistance at 111.90 and GBP/CHF is trading near the psychological level of 1.4000. But it is not too late yet, so we still have plenty of time left to play the pair. Looking at the pair today, I believe GBP/CHF will see more gains because it is currently testing its next target. JPY, on the other hand, is very weak and if it turns lower, it may see further losses. I would like to see a strong rebound if we can hold the current support at 100.
