The actress, who is starring alongside Ethan Hawke and is famous for her role in the Joker film The Batman, wrote a note to her fans telling them she is planning an October release date for her new movie. Amy recently took a break from filming the movie on location in Iceland to attend her sister's wedding back in Los Angeles. The star, who has chosen not to reveal much information about the movie, has previously said she had to watch Chris Pratt and Jason Bateman's performance of West Side Story in her "closet". In a recent blog post, Amy has now admitted she would give anything to watch her new movie, hinting that she has a few secrets to divulge. The actress posted a message on social media reading: "Just a few insights into what you won't see till October. "Hope everyone is feeling positive and loving life and yourselves." The actress then shared a picture of her with Ethan Hawke, writing: "Two more days left to be here. "My savior, my genius, my partner in crime." The script is based on a novel by Patrick DeWitt which has been adapted into a graphic novel version. The Sisters Brothers is set in 1830s New Orleans where two men have a gunfight over a woman.
