First, always follow the calibrations precautions that are in the instruction manual for your meter, which should in most cases be included in the manual that comes with your meter. Don't forget to read the manual so you'll know how to prepare the instruments prior to the measurements and how to perform the calibrations. In this video we show how to analyze different parameters by using two sensors, one of them polarized and one of them magnetized. From the measured results we understand some characteristics of our electrical system, such as the parallel resistance, the series and shunt resistances, or other important parameters like the phase difference. I think it's going to be useful so be sure to follow the link in the description below. Fractal_Bursting_Drone_By_NathanB-drum.mov 27:54

He was the last surviving member of the "Wizard" series of children's films from the 1940s, and was also known for his portrayal of Dr.

David Nelson, a psychologist who counseled mobsters and villains in several films including Thicker than Water (1946), The Mark of the Devil (1948), The Big Fix (1949), The Bigamist (1953), The Desert Rats (1955), and The Americanization of Emily (1964). Early life McDowall was born

Thomas Marland in Grand Rapids, Michigan. He was the son of Mac Marland and his wife, Rosa. He graduated from Ypsilanti High School in 1940 and entered the University of Michigan. Career McDowall made his first film appearance in 1941's War Comes to America, and then starred as a U.S. Navy sailor in Captain John Smith, USNR (1942), which earned him second billing to leading man Russell Edgington, whose nickname was "The Model Airplane Pilot". After the war, he made a handful of B movies until 1945, when he was cast as the title character in Richard Schickel's Dream of Dixie and Woody Woodhall's The China Cookbook. The two films, which were silent, were acquired by Republic Pictures and became the Wizard series, the first such series of theatrical films to star child actors in leading roles. McDowall would next star in the 1947 Walt Disney production of Treasure Island. The same year, he appeared as the young Daniel Boone in the Disney serial Davy Crockett, King of the Wild Frontier. McDowall starred in the second Wizard film, titled The Kid From Brooklyn, in 1948. The film was a success, although Disney would not make another children's film until the release of Fun and Fancy Free in 1951. In the intervening years, McDowall turned down a role in The Wizard of Oz and worked steadily in B-movie fare. McDowall starred in Disney's 1949-1950 serial, Adventures of Kit Carson, with Guy Kibbee as Kit Carson, the first
