If you're looking for a VPN with an expansive network of servers, then you'll want to check out NordVPN. Currently, the service boasts coverage across a whopping 58 countries something that other providers struggle to match. Connecting to any of these NordVPN servers is a straightforward process, too. Simply pick out a location via the map or the server list, or let the Quick Connect feature find your perfect match. This handy feature uses an algorithm to determine which server suits you best allowing you to spend less time mulling over where to put your pin, and more time surfing, streaming, or downloading with privacy. I particularly like how useful this feature is for mobile users who may be relying on (notoriously unsecure) public Wi-Fi hotspots. On the topic of security, anyone looking to engage in P2P activity should make good use of NordVPN's fleet of P2P optimized servers! These dedicated servers pack improved speed and stability, meaning your downloads will complete in a flash, and that you won't have to worry about any nosy hackers keeping tabs on your activity. And with NordVPN, you can actually get a discount if you pick out the yearly subscription! In addition to the P2P-friendly dedicated servers, Surfshark is also known for its truly unlimited bandwidth and unlimited simultaneous connections, which makes it ideal for streaming sites like Netflix. NordVPN is also generous with its P2P servers, and Turbo VPN is also really handy for tablets. Windscribe: Once you connect to the Windscribe website, they can see your IP address, log your browsing habits, or even track your locations. You can also enable more granular controls to make it harder for them to track you. For instance, you can allow them to see the websites you visit, but not record your IP address or traffic details.Windscribe's protocol is OpenVPN, and it's a pretty tight solution, with users only seeing a notification on their phone or computer, rather than being creeped on the web as much as they are with the free app. It supports P2P users, but you need a VPN sub to pay for Windscribe to be able to use it. 5ec8ef588b
