Select the Gradient tool and click on the new "gradient" layer. In the new layer outline window, click on the gradient tool in the "Gradient" box and pick a gradient color. Click on OK in the window and then OK again for the layer. Then, you can tag the new created layer "gradient" and apply it to all the clipping. Now, you can add another layer and put the gradient on it and make any needed adjustments. If you do it this way, there will be only one layer of the gradient in the layer list. To change the gradient later, use the color pick tool on the gradient layer. That an update of Lightroom can cause crashes on startup has been a problem for some time.
